PREFACE

Special Publication 103 (Revised 1996) was compiled and formatted by L.G. Youngs, Associate Engineering Geologist with the Division of Mine and Geology's Mineral Land Classification Project, from data gathered by the staff of the California Department of Conservation's Division of Mines and Geology and Office of Mine Reclamation. In addition to the Introduction and discussion of Limitations of the Data by L.G. Youngs, this report contains a discussion of California's 1995 Nonfuel Mineral Production by Susan Kohler-Antablin, Associate Geologist with the Division of Mines and Geology's Mineral Land Classification Project. Maps, including Plate I were produced by L.G. Youngs. Technical assistance in digital report formatting was provided by W.H. Pellerin and R.A. Provenzano, Department of Conservation, Information Systems Services.

MINES AND MINERAL PRODUCERS

ACTIVE IN CALIFORNIA

(1994 - 1995)

INTRODUCTION

This publication is an updated and revised list of active mines and mineral producers in California that was compiled by the California Department of Conservation (DOC) , Division of Mines and Geology (DMG) in cooperation with the DOC Office of Mine Reclamation (OMR). The list contains the names, operators, addresses, commodities, phone numbers, and locations of 917 mines or quarries reported to have produced mineral commodities in California sometime in the 2-year period 1994-1995. The mine locations, recorded in degrees of latitude and longitude, are shown on Plate 1 with a mine location number (map number) assigned to each entry.

Mine data in the List of Active Mines in California (1994-1995) are arranged alphabetically by the mine name and listed under the heading of the county name in which each operation is located. Three indexes are provided to aid in accessing the data in a variety of ways. The Index by Commodity and County is sorted alphabetically first by commodity produced and second by county name. The Index by Operator and Mine Name is sorted alphabetically first by mine operator and second by mine name. The Index by Map Number and County is sorted sequentially first by the mine location number shown on Plate 1 and second alphabetically by county name. The mine location number (map number) assigned to each mine entry is carried throughout all of the indexes and the active mines list to aid in cross-referencing.

California's mine operators file yearly with OMR to fulfill requirements of the Public Resources Code, Section 2207. Information recorded in the SMARA Database that is maintained by OMR was the fundamental data source for Mines and Mineral Producers Active in California (1994-1995). DMG staff edited and appended the data in the active mines and mineral producers list on a personal computer using database management software (Paradox for Windows). The active mines and mineral producers list was sorted into three indexes, and the location data was digitally plotted on Plate 1.

The digital database containing the List of Active Mines in California (1994-1995) is available on a 3.5-inch personal computer diskette. The database is formatted as a Delimited ASCII Text file (ca95mine.txt) and as a dBASE file (ca95mine.dbf). For information about purchasing this report and diskette, contact:

This report also contains a section titled California's 1995 Nonfuel Mineral Production, that follows this introduction. Small scale (1 inch = 80 miles) maps of the State of California, that show the locations of mines active during 1994-1995 are presented in the Appendix of this report. There is a separate map for each mineral commodity, and the maps are arranged alphabetically by mineral commodity name.

CALIFORNIA'S 1995 NONFUEL MINERAL PRODUCTION*

During 1995, California ranked third among the states in nonfuel mineral production, accounting for approximately 7 percent of the U.S. total, according to the U.S. Geological Survey Mineral Information Service. Mineral production during 1995 amounted to $2.7 billion, a 3 percent increase from 1994. Production of at least 26 types of industrial minerals in the state accounted for about 87 percent of the total *Modified by R.L. Hill, Senior Geologist, California Department of Conservation, Division of Mines and Geology (DMG), from an article by Susan Kohler-Antablin, DMG, published in May 1996 titled 1995 Annual Review of State Activities -- California in Tim O'Neil, ed., Mining Engineering: Society for Mining, Metallurgy, and Exploration, Inc., v. 48, no. 5, pp. 51-52.

value. Metals accounted for 13 percent of the total (Figure 2). California remained the nation's only producer of boron and tungsten. It also continued to lead the nation in the production of sand and gravel, portland cement, diatomite, rare earth concentrates, natural sodium sulfate, and asbestos. California ranked second in gold production during 1995 with about 950,000 troy ounces produced, a 5 percent decrease from 1994. Other minerals produced in California include bentonite clay, common clay, dimension stone, crushed stone, feldspar, fuller's earth, gemstones, gypsum, hectorite clay, iron ore, kaolin clay, lime, magnesium compounds, mercury, perlite, potash, pumice, pyrophyllite, salt, silver, soda ash, and talc.

Portland cement was California's leading industrial mineral. Its total value was $515 million produced, a 4 percent decrease from 1994. Construction sand and gravel followed with a total value of $512 million, a 2 percent decrease from 1994. Production of boron, California's third ranked industrial mineral, increased by 2 percent from 1994 with a total value of $462 million.

The amount of crushed stone produced increased relative to sand and gravel by 4 percent from 1994 to 1995, as compared to 1 percent from 1992 to 1993, and 2 percent from 1993 to 1994. During 1995, crushed stone production amounted to 34 percent of the total production of construction aggregate. The increase in production of crushed stone relative to sand and gravel is likely due to environmental concerns about instream mining operations throughout the state, resulting in a trend toward discontinuing development of additional instream sand and gravel reserves.

METALLIC MINERALS

Metallic minerals produced in California include gold, silver, tungsten, iron and mercury. Of these, gold production accounts for over 99 percent of the total value of metallic minerals.

Gold production in California experienced a 5 percent decrease in value (2 percent production decrease) from 1994. This was partially due to the 1994 closures of the Sonora Mining's Jamestown Mine in Tuolumne County and Meridian Gold's Royal Mountain King Mine in Calaveras County. Both mines are located in California's Mother Lode Belt in the Western Sierra Nevada foothills.

Homestake's McLaughlin Mine in Lake, Napa, and Yolo counties continued as the leading gold producer during 1995. That was followed by Santa Fe Pacific Gold's Mesquite Mine in Imperial County. Viceroy Resources celebrated a milestone with the pouring of the 500,000th ounce of gold bullion at its Castle Mountain Mine in San Bernardino County. The mine had been producing for about 3.5 years. Siskon Gold's

San Juan Ridge underground drift mine in Nevada County began production. Reserves are estimated at about 300,000 troy ounces.

Glamis Gold announced a new gold discovery on about 1600 acres in Imperial County. The discovery is reported to contain about 90 million short tons of ore averaging 0.017 troy ounces of gold per short ton. A final feasibility report on the project is expected to be completed in the spring of 1996.

Tungsten production continued at the Pine Creek Mine in Inyo County by Avocet Tungsten. Most of the tungsten produced during 1995 came from concentrates purchased outside of the United States. Although no mining took place in 1995, some ore was processed from existing stockpiles. Avocet plans to reopen the Pine Creek Mine during 1996.

Other metallic minerals produced in California during 1995 included silver, iron and mercury. All of the iron produced was used in the production of portland cement. All silver and mercury produced were byproducts of gold production.

NEW PERMITS

Siting and permitting of mine operations throughout the State continue to create local controversy. The leading issues involve intense land use competition, wide ranging environmental concerns, as well as noise, dust, and truck-traffic issues in populated areas. The DMG's Mineral Land Classification Program continued to provide lead agencies with mineral resource maps for use in land use planning and mineral resource conservation. The DMG completed classification projects in Los Angeles, Orange, Placer, and San Bernardino Counties during 1995.

Permits for new and expanded sand and gravel operations were granted by several city, county and federal lead agencies throughout California. One new permit was approved for Granite Construction's Vernalis site in Stanislaus County. The operation will provide about 45 million short tons of construction aggregate reserve to the Central California Region. One of the permit conditions is a $10-million interchange across Interstate 5. Permits were also granted to Solano Concrete and Teichert Aggregate to mine about 120 acres of construction aggregate adjacent to Cache Creek in Yolo County. Owl Rock obtained a permit in late 1994 to mine sand along Wilson Creek in Riverside County. San Mateo County approved an expansion of the Guadalupe Valley (Brisbane) Quarry operated by American Rock and Asphalt.

Canyon Resources received both county and federal approval for mining at the Briggs Mine site in Inyo County. The mine is expected to produce 650,000 troy ounces of gold during its anticipated 7-year life. Mining is expected to begin in mid 1996.

Siskon Gold's Big Horn Mine in Los Angeles County was granted a permit to mine. A successful appeal by the Mojave Water Agency against the mine's proposed processing plant in Adelanto in San Bernardino County has put the project on hold.

MINING LEGISLATION

During the last days of the 1994-95 California legislative term, SB 1108 was enacted. It granted remediating agencies limited liability for abandoned mine clean-up. Under provisions of the bill, if a public agency or private entity in partnership with a public agency undergoes a remediation plan which successfully reduces the impact for water contamination, the agency or its affiliate cannot be held liable for any other pre-existing contamination. The bill is expected to diminish the reluctance of such remediating agencies to confront mine clean-up due to possible legal consequences.

LIMITATIONS OF THE DATA

The accuracy of the data presented in Mines and Mineral Producers Active in California (1994-1995) is in part predicated upon the accuracy and completeness of the original information reported by the operators to the OMR. Effort was made to edit the data for consistency of form and structure as well as accuracy. However, it is quite likely that some inaccuracies do exist. For example, some active mine sites may not be located on Plate 1 at the accuracy desired. It is also possible that some active mines may have been inadvertently excluded from the revised active mines list. The DMG will update and revise the database annually in order to provide the most accurate list of California's active mines and mineral producers available.

The principal commodity produced at each mine is shown as reported by the operator. Other mineral commodities may also be produced at some mines. Also, the commodities reported as stone or rock are not exclusive; i.e. rock production may also include stone, decorative rock, or dimension stone production. Therefore, the user searching for rock products may wish to contact the operators in a particular area who are listed as producing any of these commodities.

There are a few operator names or company names in the list of active mines and mineral producers that have been slightly truncated. There may also be a very few mine names that have also been truncated. This was caused when the length of a name exceeded the width of its field in the digital database.

The DMG welcomes all suggestions for improvements, corrections, or omissions to Mines and Mineral Producers Active in California (1994-1995). Please send comments to:

APPENDIX

The appendix contains small scale (1 inch = 80 miles) maps of the State of California, that show locations of mines active during 1994-1995. There is a separate map for each mineral commodity, and the maps are arranged alphabetically by mineral commodity name.
